Dear Emma,

Hello from China! I'm at my new school in Shanghai now. My job is great. This is a photo of some of my students. They are great, but the English classes are very big – 35 students in one class! They are different nationalities – Chinese, of course, and also Korean and Thai. I'm the only person from the US at the school – the other teachers are Chinese and British. Shanghai is an amazing city, but it's expensive. And the language is very different from English. I'm in a Mandarin class for beginners. The classes are interesting and my teacher is helpful. But I don't understand very much. My favorite expression is: Please say that again!

How are you? Is your new job in Seattle OK?

Email me soon.
