

Down by the Salley Gardens

Down by the salley gardens
my love and I did meet;
She passed the salley gardens
with little snow-white feet.
She bid me take love easy,
as the leaves grow on the tree;
But I, being young and foolish,
with her did not agree.

In a field by the river
my love and I did stand,
And on my leaning shoulder
she laid her snow-white hand.
She bid me take life easy,
as the grass grows on the weirs;
But I was young and foolish,
and now am full of tears.

William Butler Yeats

Unten an den Weiden garten
sind uns meine Liebste ich begegnet,
an den Weiden garten ging sie
auf schneeweißen Füßen vorüber.
Sie bat mich die Liebe leicht zu nehmen,
so wie die Blätter, die am Baum wachsen.
Ich aber, jung und töricht,
konnte ihr nicht zustimmen.

Auf dem Feld am dem Fluss stand meine Liebste und ich,
und auf meiner schiefen Schulter
legte sie ihre schneeweiße Hand.
Sie bat mich, das Leben leicht zu nehmen,
wie das Gras, das am Wehr wächst.
Ich aber, jung und töricht,
bin nun voll von Tränen erfüllt.

Preface

William Butler Yeats published his poem Down by the Salley Gardens in 1889 in the collection The Wanderings of Oisín and Other Poems. Salley is the English form of the Irish word saileach, which means "willow tree" (salix). Herbert Hughes, the Irish composer and researcher in folk music, took up the poem in 1909 and created the well-known melody.

In the present arrangement, Herbert Hughes' melody has been transformed into a sensitive a cappella setting for choir. Markus Detterbeck has skilfully combined the melodic devices such as the sounds of the bagpipe drone with motifs material taken from the original melody. This gives rise to rhythmic-melodic patterns which lend to the song a kind of floating effect. Counterparts provide an atmospheric fullness, though without forcing themselves too noticeably into the foreground. The piece should be sung with the greatest possible simplicity. The principal voice can certainly be performed with slight embellishments (as suggested in the notation) typical of Irish music.

Wort

Das Gedicht Down by the Salley Gardens veröffentlichte William Butler Yeats im Jahr 1889 in seiner Gedichtsammlung The Wanderings of Oisín and Other Poems. Salley ist das englische Wort für das irische saileach und bedeutet „Weidenbaum“ (Salix). Der irische Komponist und Volksliedforscher Herbert Hughes griff das Gedicht 1909 auf und schuf die heute bekannte Melodie.

Das vorliegende Arrangement verarbeitet die Melodie von Herbert Hughes zu einem feinsinnigen Arrangement für Chor a cappella. Markus Detterbeck verknüpft dazu geschickt irische Stilmittel wie Bordunklänge mit motivischem Material, das aus der Liedmelodie gewonnen ist. So entstehen rhythmisch-melodische Patterns, die dem Song eine schwebende Wirkung verleihen. Gegenstimmen sorgen, ohne sich zu sehr in den Vordergrund zu drängen, für eine atmosphärische Dichte. Der Satz sollte mit größtmöglicher Schlichtheit gesungen werden, wobei die Hauptstimme durchaus mit für irische Musik typischen kleinen Verzierungen (wie im Notentext vorgeschlagen) gestaltet werden kann.
